Therapeutic Goals

Progress in counseling is expected, however specific outcomes are not guaranteed. The goal of counseling is to confront and work through issues over time toward resolution. The process of counseling can involve emotional pain and side effects, which can lead to an experience of symptoms getting worse before they get better. You the client are always in control of and free to make decisions regarding your care, including seeking a second opinion, referral or choosing to terminate the counseling relationship.

Treatment Methods, Length and Referrals

Momentum Mental Health is committed to provide quality, time-effective clinical counseling in a safe and respectful environment designed for your progress. I provide a positive approach focused on transformation and hope. My role is to help you identify particular personal, relationship and/or situational issues and to apply your particular strengths and resources toward healing and resolution. I emphasize relationship dynamics while employing a variety of counseling methods including Person-Centered Therapy, Crisis and Trauma-Focused Therapy, Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy, Emotionally-Focused Therapy, Solution-Focused Therapy, Expressive Therapies, Play Therapy, Art Therapy, Family Systems Therapy and Faith-based counseling. We will work together to determine the length of treatment to best meet your unique needs and circumstances, while striving to reach your goals in a time-effective manner. Group sessions meet a predetermined number of times, most often six to ten. At times, a referral to another counselor or helping professional is necessary. Contact information for referrals will be provided to you. While Momentum Mental Health is an independent counseling practice, we are grateful for the available excellent in-office resources of Summit Family Medicine to assist in comprehensive wellness. You, the client are responsible for contacting and evaluating those referrals and/or alternatives.

Confidentiality and Safety

Momentum Mental Health is committed to always providing a safe counseling experience. Generally speaking, the information provided by and to you the client during therapy sessions is legally confidential and cannot be released without your consent. Colorado State law provides some exceptions to this confidentiality, which include:

- (1) a determination that you, the client, are a danger to yourself or someone else;
- (2) you the client disclose abuse, harm or neglect of a child, elderly or disabled person;
- (3) you the client disclose a suspected threat to national security;
- (4) you the client request and authorize the release of records; and
- (5) your counselor is required by court order to disclose treatment information.

Beyond these legal exceptions, client records are confidential and protected by Momentum Mental Health. Records will only be shared with client's permission and also at the professional discretion of Momentum Mental Health when deemed in the best interest of the client.

If, by chance, we should see one another outside of the counseling office, I will protect your privacy and the confidentiality of our professional relationship by not initiating interaction. I will gladly reciprocate appropriately if you initiate contact in this situation. I, the counselor, am not responsible for any breach of confidentiality through your interaction with others, including an insurance company or payment method (including check or credit card statements).

Therapy is normally provided in-person, but may be available online (e.g. over Zoom) at the discretion of Momentum Mental Health or the client. Other forms of electronic communication (e.g. e-mail, texting, etc.) are primarily used for scheduling, brief response or therapeutic support. If a client chooses to send personal information by way of electronic communication, the security of that information is the client's responsibility. Momentum Mental Health uses a secure server, and if necessary will use an encrypted form of transfer for confidential records. Once communication is transferred to the client's server, the security of that information becomes the client's responsibility. Additionally, it is the client's responsibility to discern what information is sent electronically. Client acknowledges that electronic communication is by nature more vulnerable to human and technological error, and assumes this risk. Occasionally, extended texting may be appropriate for therapeutic client support. This is at the client's discretion. In some cases, online counseling may be permitted. Please note that e-mail correspondence for this purpose is used only for appropriate situations and must meet ethical codes. Although every precaution will be taken, electronic communication may not be completely confidential. Electronic response time is typically 12-48 hours. At any point, if the counseling conflicts with ethical standards, Momentum Mental Health reserves the right to discontinue services. If you are in crisis, feel unsafe, or are actively suicidal, please attempt to contact me, and then call your local emergency room, hotline, or 911.
